

“Where better than Philadelphia to invent the future of a free press?”

– H.F. “Gerry” Lenfest

Philadelphia is the birthplace of the United States and the cradle of the First Amendment. And Philadelphia is where The Lenfest Institute for Journalism is helping build the future of local news.

The Institute’s mission is to support the vitality and independence of local news, building equitable news enterprises that are representative of our diverse communities. This work would not be possible without the support of the hundreds of donors who understand that local journalism is a bedrock of our democracy.

Over the past year, The Institute — together with its funding partners, the John S. and James L. Knight Foundation, the Independence Public Media Foundation, William Penn Foundation, the Facebook Journalism Project, the Google News Initiative, and Democracy Fund — has provided grant support to The Philadelphia Inquirer, Impacto, Al Día, G-Town Radio, Resolve Philly, The Philadelphia Tribune, WURD Radio, New Mainstream Press, and dozens of other news organizations both in Philadelphia and around the United States.

Public-service journalism has never been more urgent. During this unprecedented time, journalists have been there for us, often at great risk to their own health and safety. They have covered protests on the Parkway and reported from the corridors of power in City Hall, Harrisburg, and Washington. They have told stories from the frontlines of the COVID-19 pandemic in hospitals, nursing homes, and neighborhoods around Greater Philadelphia. They not only keep us informed, they help keep us free.

Thank you to the donors listed here and to the 2,400 others who have recently contributed and joined us in creating a sustainable path forward for essential local journalism.
